3. Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart (January 27, 1756-December 5, 1791) is considered one of the greatest musical geniuses of all time, authoring over 600 works before his premature death at 35.

Mozart showed remarkable musical aptitude early in life. Recognizing his enormous talent, his father devoted most of his time to his son's musical education, and taking him on concert tours throughout Europe.

In his rest of life, Mozart made his living performing and selling his compositions and giving music lessons. But, despite his musical talent he had difficulty earning sufficient income to support a family. He died in poverty.

Mozart excelled at nearly every kind of musical composition. He wrote 22 operas, over 40 symphonies, and many others compositions. Much of Mozart's work is still performed and enjoyed today.

4. William Shakespeare

William Shakespeare (baptized 26 April 1564 – 23 April 1616) was an English poet and playwright, now widely regarded as the greatest writer in the English language and the world's preeminent dramatist. He is often called England's national poet and the "Bard of Avon" (or simply "The Bard"). His surviving works consist of 38 plays, 154 sonnets, two long narrative poems, and several other poems created between 1591-1593. His plays have been translated into every major living language and are performed more often than those of any other playwright.

Amazingly, no original manuscripts survive reflecting the fact that many of these manuscripts were written purely for performance and were not regarded as pieces of literary work. There is also no general consensus on when all the plays were first performed.
